STAHL CELEBRATES 75 YEARS OF SERVICE AND INNOVATION TO THE WORK TRUCK INDUSTRY

Wooster, Ohio (Jan. 1, 2021) – From building a truck body for Clark Gable, once one of the biggest stars in Hollywood, to firmly establishing its position as a leader in truck service bodies, STAHL’s legacy spans 75 years.

As STAHL, a Scott Fetzer Company, celebrates its diamond anniversary in 2021, the company’s commitment to its distributors, customers and vendors remains crystal clear – to continue to deliver exceptional quality and service with the highest level of integrity in every facet of its operations.

“Our company has proven to be one of the industry’s best in building American-made truck service bodies for long-lasting performance,” said Craig Moses, Vice President of Sales and Marketing. “We’d like to thank all of our loyal distributors and their customers that have been part of this success for the last 75 years.”

About STAHL/ A Scott Fetzer Company

Since 1946, STAHL has been manufacturing durable and rugged truck bodies and mobile cranes. A leader in the work truck industry, STAHL introduced the industry’s first galvanneal steel truck body and its exclusive lock-bolt construction. Based in Wooster, Ohio, STAHL offers its product line through a network of distributors located throughout the United States and Canada.
